KEVIN BOUDREAUX

Kevin is a 22-year-old young man with autism that has accomplished so much. His life and achievements serve as an inspiration and encouragement to others.

Many families worry that their children with disabilities will not find work, and are destined to the life of a couch potato after high school as Kevin's family did.

Kevin graduated from the post-secondary program on the west bank last year and has become the poster child of the program. He was actually one of the students in special education that was able to graduate from high school with a diploma.

himself a job. He approached his local Rouses and asked for a job and he got hired right away. He started out as a stocker. Since then, he was promoted and now works at the service desk. His family is very appreciative of Rouses for being open minded and giving Kevin a chance.

Besides working Kevin has many other hobbies as well. He enjoys playing guitar on a regular basis. He also loves to record himself as he plays and sings along. He loves playing sports like football and basketball as it excites him and helps him overcome a bad day.

Kevin loves to help others and show off his accomplishments. His family is very proud of him and hopes that his story will encourage other families.
