STUART A. SIMON

Stuart Simon was born in St. Louis, Missouri but grew up in New Orleans. He holds a BS in Music from Millsap's College from 2007, and two Master's Degrees, both from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and both from 2012. One is in Music History, and the other is in Library and Information Science.

After obtaining these degrees, Stuart returned to New Orleans and pursued a post-baccalaureate certificate in Applied Computing with an emphasis on Integrated Application Development, receiving that certificate in May 2016. Stuart began working at LSU Health's Human Development Center in February 2016. His duties are varied and include graphics specialist, webmaster, database specialist, and photographer (Stuart's father is a photographer also).

Stuart enjoys music, New Orleans cultural life, and singing in the choir at Touro Synagogue.

Outside of work, he enjoys music, New Orleans cultural life, and singing in the choir at Touro Synagogue.

His father Eric is a kidney doctor and an avid photographer who works for, among others, the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Foundation. His mother Cathy is the Associate Dean for Student Affairs at the LSUHSC School of Medicine and is a runner. Stuart has a sister who lives and works in Charleston, South Carolina in the invitations business.

Stuart can be reached at ssimo3@lsuhsc.edu or you can visit him in his office in the Human Development Center building in room 463.
